I have received your letter concerning Vice President Bush. As you may know, President Reagan has, on several occasions, discussed the important role the Vice President has performed over the past seven years. Hopefully, this will be useful to you.

Dear Bob:

Thanks for your note on the passage of the housing bill. Promoting the availability of decent, affordable housing for all Americans is one of the President's primary goals, and he's been pleased with the progress that has been made since 1981 in getting interest rates down and increasing our Nation's stock of multi-family housing units.

The enactment of the first free-standing housing bill in this Administration is a fitting capstone to these efforts. Making the FHA's insuring authorities permanent means that homebuyers will no longer be threatened with temporary program shutdowns. The President also regards the permanent authorization of housing vouchers for low-income families and the Fair Housing Initiatives Program as key steps forward.

Your association has my thanks for helping to transform this bill from a potential budget buster that would have reversed important housing policy reforms into a fiscally responsible bill that actually advances the reform process.

Dear Mr. Kwapisz:

We appreciate your taking time to comment on the State Department videotape briefing "Democracy in Central America." You said it did not support the President's policies in Central America and undercuts the Resistance. I would like you to know, however, that the videotape was carefully prepared under both White House and State Department guidance, and was designed to explain the Administration's overall policy in the rapidly changing political climate in the region.

The Administration believes the Nicaraguan Resistance is essential to producing the necessary pressure to bring about a democratic opening in Nicaragua and an end to the regional security threat posed by the Sandinistas. The President also supports the current negotiations and the Guatemala peace process as a parallel method of reaching the same objectives. Six months ago, a videotape on U.S. policy might have put more exclusive emphasis on the Resistance's role in bringing about this change. Now, the Administration's position on the diplomatic track must be explained as well.

We believe the State Department videotape accurately reflects current U.S. policy toward Central America. It shows that Nicaragua is the only Central American country that remains a communist dictatorship. It depicts the Sandinistas engaged in a massive military buildup. It explains how the other Central American countries have been held hostage to Sandinista aggression. But it does not propose a solution. To discuss short-term strategy would make the videotape a dated product and would allow little room for the kinds of debate the videotape was meant to introduce.

At this time neither the White House nor the State Department has plans to withdraw the videotape. Again, we appreciate your consideration in providing your comments to us.

Dear Mr. Quintela:

The President greatly appreciates the support that the Hispanic community has given him. He feels a real kinship with your community, and for a simple reason -- here is an alliance based not on convenience but on values.

This is a point worth elaborating. Many of the values and principles that the Hispanic community embodies in its daily life -- values such as pride in family, the work ethic, and love of God and country -- are precisely the ideas that President Reagan came to Washington to promote. They are at the heart of the President's social and domestic policy agenda, under the guidance of the White House Office of Policy Development.

Further, as you are aware, this Administration endorses the idea that people should be judged not on the basis of their skin color or race, but on their individual merit. We are working toward an ideal that I am sure the Hispanic community shares -- an America where all men, created equal and endowed by their creator with inalienable rights, can live without the prejudice and favoritism that diminish and divide us.

Gary Bauer, Assistant to the President for Policy Development, with whom I have shared this letter, has expressed interest in meeting representatives of your group to discuss shared goals and interests. I will have his office contact you shortly to see if a meeting can be arranged.

Best wishes.

Dear Colonel Olvey:

Thank you for your letter inviting the Chief of Staff to meet with cadets in your Domestic Affairs Forum while they visit Washington from April 7 to April 9, 1988.

Your invitation is appreciated, but the heavy demands of Senator Baker's schedule will find him out of Washington that week. However, he asked me to thank you for your kindness and to send you his best wishes for a successful forum.

Dear Mr. McGowan:

Thank you for your letter of February 9 and for your thoughtful enclosure of the book, Television.

I look forward to reading this fascinating overview and hope that time may allow me the opportunity to see the PBS series as well.

Again, thanks for your kindness.

Warm regards.

Sincerely,

Howard H. Baker, Jr.

Dear Jim:

I was recently told of the difficult time you are now going through, and I just want you to know I'm thinking of you and your family. I'm joined in that sentiment, I'm sure, by your many friends and by all those who have been aided or inspired by your distinguished service to our beloved State of Tennessee and our Nation. All of us return to you now some of the concern you've generously shown for others.

You and your family are in my prayers.

Sincerely,

Howard H. Baker, Jr.

Dear Marge:

Sorry for the delay in responding to your January 7 letter inviting me to participate in your fundraiser. I appreciate your loyal support, and I would like to help out with your event.

Regrettably, I must decline. The demands of my schedule will not allow me to participate in out-of-Washington events. Nevertheless, I would be honored to have my name listed on your invitation as an honorary sponsor of the event. I am delighted to be associated with your campaign, and I hope that this will be of some benefit to you.

With best wishes,

Sincerely,

Howard H. Baker, Jr.
Chief of Staff to the President
